CME holiday, but not U.S. bank holiday.

Friday, April 2, 2010 will be a polling day.
 Christmas Day 2010 falls on Saturday, Dec. 25, 2010; we anticipate Friday, December 24, 2009, will be a CME holiday and non-polling day. However, to date, no U.S. bank holidays are declared for either the preceding Friday or succeeding Monday. U.S. exchanges have not yet determined holiday schedules for 2010 (NYSE or CME Group).

Note: The above are the days in 2009 and 2010 on which CME Group and EMTA currently are not scheduled to conduct the CME/EMTA Russian Ruble Reference Rate Survey (in addition to week-end days). CME and EMTA may update this list at any time during the year in response to new or corrected information received by them regarding Moscow, New York and Chicago bank holiday schedules. This list is for information purposes only and CME and EMTA are not responsible for any action taken by any party in reliance on this list.

* Locale of the specific holiday for either Russia = R or United States = US or CME Group = CME is indicated.

**Possible Bridge Holiday in Russia (based upon past history). None identified to date.

***New Russian bank holidays were added to the non-polling day list as of 12/3/08.
